

PAR

Those parts, formerly reckoned parenchymatus, are now found to be bundle of exceedingly small threads. Chyde.
 PARENESIS. n. f. [παράθεσις,] Persuasion. Di.
 PARENT. n. f. [parent, Fr. parents, Latin.] A father or mother.
 All true virtues are to honour true religion as their parent, and all well-ordered commonwealths to love her as their chiefest stay. Hooker.
 As a publick parent of the state,
 My justice, and thy crime, requires thy fate. Dryden.
 In vain on the dissembl'd mother's tongue
 Had cunning art, and sly persuasion hung;
 And real care in vain and native love
 In the true parent's panting breast had strove. Prior.
 PARENTAGE. n. f. [parentage, Fr. from parent.] Extraction; birth; condition with respect to the rank of parents.
 A gentleman of noble parentage,
 Of fair demasns, youthful and nobly allied. Shakespeare.
 Though men esteem thee low of parentage,
 Thy father is th' eternal king. Par. Reg.
 To his leave go.
 And from himself your parentage may know. Dryden.
 We find him, not only boasting of his parentage, as an Israelite at large, but particularizing his descent from Benjamin. Atterbury's Sermon.
 PARENTAL. adj. [from parent.] Becoming parents; pertaining to parents.
 It overthrows the careful courtes and parental provision of nature, whereby the young ones newly excluded, are sustained by the dam. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 These eggs hatched by the warmth of the sun into little worms, feed without any need of parental care. Dryden.
 Young ladies, on whom parental controul sits heavily, give a man of intrigue room to think, that they want to be parents. Clarissa.
 PARENTATION. n. f. [from parents, Latin.] Something done or said in honour of the dead.
 PARENTHESIS. n. f. [parenthesis, Fr. παρέθεσις, and τίθημι.] A sentence or included in another sentence, as that which incloses it; being commonly marked thus: ().
 In vain is my person excepted by a parenthesis of words, when so many hands are armed against me with swords. King Charles.
 In his Indian relations, are contained strange and incredible accounts; he is seldom mentioned, without a derogatory parenthesis in any author. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 Thou shalt be seen,
 Tho' with some short parenthesis between,
 High on the throne of wit. Dryden.
 Don't suffer every occasional thought to carry you away into a long parenthesis, and thus stretch out your discourse, and divert you from the point in hand. Watts's Logic.
 PARENTHETICAL. adj. [from parenthesis.] Pertaining to a parenthesis.
 PAPER. n. f. [from pare.] An instrument to cut away the surface.
 A hone and a paper, like sole of a boot,
 To pare away gristle, and to raise up the root. Tupper.
 PAPERERY. n. f. [παράρησις and ἔργον.] Something unimportant; something done by the by.
 The scripture being serious, and commonly omitting such pateries, it will be unreasonable to condemn all laughter. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 PARGET. n. f. Plaster laid upon roofs of rooms.
 Gold was the parget, and the ceiling bright
 Did shine all scaly with great plates of gold;
 The floor with jasp and emerald was dight. Spenser.
 Of English tale, the coarser sort is called plaster or parget; the finer, spand.
 To PARGET. v. a. [from the noun.] To plaster; to cover with plaster.
 There are not more arts of disguising our corporeal blemishes than our moral; and yet, whilst we thus paint and parget our own deformities, we cannot allow any the least imperfection of another's to remain undetected. Government of the Tongue.
 PARGETER. n. f. [from parget.] A plasterer.
 PARELION. n. f. [παράλιον and ἄλιος.] A mock sun.
 To neglect that supreme resplendency, that shines in God, for those dim representations of it, that we so doat on in the creature, is as absurd, as it were for a Persian to offer his sacrifice to a parhelion, instead of adoring the sun. Boyle.
 PARIETAL. adj. [from paries, Latin.] Constituting the sides or walls.
 The lower part of the parietal and upper part of the temporal bones were fractured. Sharp's Surgery.
 PARIETARY. n. f. [parietaire, Fr. paries, Lat.] An herb. Ans.
 PARIING. n. f. [from pare.] That which is pared off any thing; the rind.

PAR

To his guest, tho' no way sparing,
 He eat himself the rind and paring. Pope.
 In May, after rain, pare off the surface of the earth, and with the parings raise your hills high, and enlarge their breadth. Mortimer's Husbandry.
 PARIS. n. f. An herb.
 PARISH. n. f. [parochia, low Lat. parroisse, Fr. of the Greek παροικία, i.e. accolatum conventus, acclatus, para vicinia.] The particular charge of a secular priest. Every church is either cathedral, conventual, or parochial: cathedral is that, where there is a bishop seated, so called a cathedra; conventual consists of regular clerks, professing some order of religion, or of a dean and chapter, or other college of spiritual men; parochial is that which is instituted for laying divine service, and administering the holy sacraments to the people, dwelling within a certain compass of ground near unto it. Our realm was first divided into parishes by Honorius, archbishop of Canterbury, in the year of our Lord 636.
 Dametas came piping and dancing, the merriest man in a parish. Sidney.
 The tithes, his parish freely paid, he took;
 But never f'd, or curs'd with bell or book. Dryden.
 PARISH. adj.
 1. Belonging to the parish; having the care of the parish.
 A parish priest was of the pilgrim train,
 An awful, reverend and religious man. Dryden.
 Not parish clerk, who calls the palm so clear. Gay.
 The office of the church is performed by the parish priest, at the time of his interment. Shakespeare.
 A man, after his natural death, was not capable of the least parish office. Atterbury's Sermon.
 2. Maintained by the parish.
 The poor and the parish girl are entire new characters. Gay.
 PARISHIONER. n. f. [parroissien, Fr. from parish.] One that belongs to the parish.
 I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners; for their sons are well tutor'd by you. Shakespeare.
 Hail bishop Valentine, whose day this is,
 All the air is thy diocese;
 And all the chirping choristers,
 And other birds are thy parishioners. Dome.
 In the greater out-parishes, many of the parishioners, tho' neglect, do perish. Grant.
 I have deposited thirty marks, to be distributed among the poor parishioners. Addison's Spectator.
 PARISHOR. n. f. [for apparitor.] A beadle; a summoner of the courts of civil law.
 You shall be summon'd by an host of parishors; you shall be sentenced in the spiritual court. Dryden.
 PARITY. n. f. [parité, Fr. paritas, Lat.] Equality; resemblance.
 We may here justly tax the dishonesty and shamefulness of the mouths, who have upbraided us with the opinion of a certain stoical parity of sins. Hall.
 That Christ or his apostles ever commanded to set up such a parity of presbyters, and in such a way as those Scots endeavor, I think is not very disputable. K. Charles.
 Survey the total set of animals, and we may, in their legs or organs of progression, observe an equality of length and parity of numeration; that is, not any to have an odd leg, or the movers of one side not exactly answered by the other. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 Those accidental occurrences, which excited Socrates to the discovery of such an invention, might fall in with that man that is of a perfect parity with Socrates. Hale.
 Their agreement, in essential characters, makes rather an identity than a parity. Glavinille.
 Women could not live in that parity and equality of experience with their husbands, as now they do. Grant.
 By an exact parity of reason, we may argue, if a man has no sense of those kindnesses that pass upon him, from one like himself, whom he sees and knows, how much less shall his heart be affected with the grateful sense of his favours, whom he converses with only by imperfect speculations, by the discourses of reason, or the discoveries of faith. Swift's Sermon.
 By parity of reason, we must expect a peace so much worse about two years hence. Swift's Miscellaneous.
 PARK. n. f. [parcus, Sax. para, Fr.] A piece of ground inclosed and fenced with wild beasts of chase, which a man may have by prescription or the king's grant. Manwood, in his forest-laws, defines it thus: a park is a place for privilege for wild beasts of venery, and also for other wild beasts, that are beasts of the forest and of the chase: and those wild beasts are to have a firm peace and protection there, so that no man may hurt or chase them within the park, without license of the owner: a park is of another nature, than either a chase or a warren; for a park must be inclosed, and may not be open; if it does, it is a good cause of seizure into the king's hands: and the owner cannot have action against such as hunt in his park, if it lies open.
 We have parks and inclosures of all sorts of beasts and birds, which we use not only for view or rareness, but likewise for dissections and trials. Darwin.
 To PARK.

PAR

To PARK. v. a. [from the noun.] To inclose as in a park.
 How are we park'd, and bounded in a pale?
 A little herd of England's tim'rous deer,
 Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs. Shakespeare.
 PARKER. n. f. [from park.] A park-keeper. Ans.
 PARKLEAVES. n. f. An herb. Ans.
 PARLE. n. f. [from parler, French.] Conversation; talk; oral treaty; oral discussion of any thing.
 Of all the gentlemen,
 That every day with parle encounter me,
 In thy opinion, which is worthiest love. Shakespeare.
 Our trumpet call'd you to this general parle. Shakespeare.
 The bishop, by a parle, is, with a show
 Of combination, cunningly betray'd. Daniel.
 Why meet we thus like wrangling advocates,
 To urge the justice of our cause with words?
 I hate this parle; 'tis tame: if we must meet,
 Give me my arms. Race's Ambitious Step-mother.
 To PARLEY. v. n. [from parler, French.] To treat by word of mouth; to talk; to discuss any thing orally. It is much used in war, for a meeting of enemies to talk.
 A Turk desired the captain to send some, with whom they might more conveniently parley. Knolly's Hist. of the Turks.
 He parleys with her a while, as imagining she would advise him to proceed. Broome.
 PARLEY. n. f. [from the verb.] Oral treaty; talk; conference; discussion by word of mouth.
 Seek rather by parley to recover them than by the sword. Sid.
 Well, by my will, we shall admit no parley:
 A rotten case abides no handling. Shakespeare.
 In such a parley should I answer thee. Shakespeare.
 Summon a parley, we will talk with him. Shakespeare.
 Let us resolve never to have any parley with our lulls, but to make some considerable progress in our repentance. Calamy.
 No gentle means could be effay'd;
 'Twas beyond parley when the siege was laid. Dryden.
 Force, never yet a generous heart did gain;
 We yield on parley, but are storm'd in vain. Dryden.
 Yet when some better fated youth
 Shall with his arms parley move thee,
 Reflect one moment on his truth,
 Who dying thus, persists to love thee. Prior.
 PARLIAMENT. n. f. [parliamentum, low Lat. parlement, Fr.] In England, is the assembly of the king and three estates of the realm; namely, the lords spiritual, the lords temporal, and commons, for the debating of matters touching the common wealth, especially the making and correcting of laws; which assembly or court is, of all others, the highest, and of greatest authority. Cowell.
 The king is fled to London,
 To call a present court of parliament. Shakespeare.
 Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,
 To make a shambles of the parliament house.
 The true use of parliaments is very excellent; and be often called, and continued as long as is necessary.
 I thought the right way of parliaments, the most safe for my crown, as best pleasing to my people. King Charles.
 These are mob readers: if Virgil and Martial stood for parliament-men, we know who would carry it. Dryden.
 PARLIAMENTARY. adj. [from parliament.] Enacted by parliament; relating to parliament; pertaining to parliament.
 To the three first titles of the two houses, or lines, and conquest, were added two more; the authorities parliamentary and parol.
 Many things, that obtain as common law, had their original by parliamentary acts or constitutions, made in writings by the king, lords, and commons.
 Credit to run ten millions in debt, without parliamentary security; I think to be dangerous and illegal. Swift.
 PARLOUR. n. f. [parloir, French; parlatorio, Italian.]
 1. A room in monasteries, where the religious meet and converse.
 2. A room in houses on the first floor, elegantly furnished for reception or entertainment.
 Can we judge it a thing seemly, for a man to go about the building of an house to the God of heaven, with no other appearance than if his end were to rear up a kitchen or a parlour for his own use. Hooker.
 Back again fair Alma led them right,
 And soon into a goodly parlour brought. Fa. Queen.
 Kitchen, to receive the entertainments of the parlour. South.
 Roof and sides were like a parlour made,
 A soft recess, and a cool summer shade. Dryden.
 PARLOUS. adj. [This might seem to come from parler, Fr. to speak; but Junius derives it, I think, rightly, from parileus, in which sense it answers to the Latin improbus.] Keen; sprightly; waggish.
 Midas durst communicate
 To none but to his wife his ears of state;
 One must be truffled, and he though her fit,
 As passing prudent, and a parlous wit. Dryden.
 PARLOUSNESS. n. f. [from parlous.] Quickness; keenness of temper.

PAR

PARMA-CITTY. n. f. Corruptedly for sperma ceti. Ans.

 The married state of parochial pastors hath given them the opportunity of setting a more exact and universal pattern of holy living, to the people committed to their charge. Atterbury.
 PARODY. n. f. [parodie, Fr. παρῳδία.] A kind of writing, in which the words of an author or his thoughts are taken, and by a slight change adapted to some new purpose.
 The imitations of the ancients are added together with some of the parodies and allusions to the most excellent of the moderns. Pope's Dunciad.
 To PARODY. v. a. [parodier, Fr. from parody.] To copy by way of parody.
 I have translated, or rather parodied, a poem of Horace, in which I introduce you advising me. Pope.
 PARONYMOUS. adj. [παρωνυμους.] Resembling another word. Shew your critical learning in the etymology of terms, the synonymous and the paronymous or kindred names. Watts.
 PAROLE. n. f. [parole, French.] Word given as an assurance; promise given by a prisoner not to go away.
 Love's votaries entreat each others soul,
 'Till both of them live but upon parole. Cleveland.
 Be very tender of your honour, and not fall in love; because I have a scruple, whether you can keep your parole, if you become a prisoner to the ladies. Swift.
 PARONOMASIA. n. f. [παρωνομασία.] A rhetorical figure, in which, by the change of a letter or syllable, several things are alluded to. It is called, in Latin, agminatio. Di.
 PAROQUET. n. f. [parroquet or perroquet, French.] A small species of parrot.
 The great, red and blue, are parrots; the middlemost, called popinjays; and the lesser, parroquets: in all above twenty forts. Grew.
 I would not give my parroquet
 For all the doves that ever flew. Prior.
 PARONYCHIA. n. f. [παρωνυχία; paronychie, Fr.] A preternatural swelling or sore under the root of the nail in one's finger; a felon; a whitlow. Di.
 PAROTID. adj. [parotide, Fr. παροτίς, παρά and ὠτίς.] Salivary; so named because near the ears.
 Beasts and birds, having one common use of spittle, are furnished with the parotid glands, which help to supply the mouth with it. Grew.
 PAROTIS. n. f. [παροτίς.] A tumour in the glandules behind and about the ears, generally called the emunctories of the brain; though, indeed, they are the external fountains of the saliva of the mouth. W. Jensen.
 PAROXYSM. [παροξυσμός; paroxysmus, Fr.] A fit; periodical exacerbation of a disease.
 I fancied to myself a kind of ease, in the change of the paroxysm. Dryden.
 Amorous girls, through the fury of an hysterical paroxysm, are cast into a trance for an hour. Harvey.
 The greater distance of time there is between the paroxysms, the fever is less dangerous, but more obstinate. Arbutnot.
 PARRICIDE. n. f. [parricide, Fr. parricida, Latin.]
 1. One who destroys his father.
 I told him the revenging gods
 'Gainst parricides did all the thunder bend,
 Spoke with how manifold strength a bond
 The child was bound to th' father. Shakespeare.
 2. One who destroys or invades any to whom he owes particular reverence; as his country or patron.
 3. [Parricide, Fr. parricidium, Lat.] The murder of a father; murder of one to whom reverence is due.
 Although he were a prince in military virtue approved, and likewise a good law-maker; yet his cruelties and parricides weighed down his virtues. Bacon.
 Morat was always bloody, now he's base;
 And has so far in usurpation gone,
 He will by parricide secure the throne. Dryden.
 PARRICIDAL. adj. [from parricide, Latin.] Relating to parricides. } parricide; committing parricide.
 He is now paid in his own way, the parricidal animal, and punishment of murderers is upon him. Brown.
 PARRROT. n. f. [parroquet, French.] A particoloured bird of the species of the hooked bill, remarkable for the exact imitation of the human voice.
 Some will ever more peep thro' their eyes,
 And laugh like parrots at a bag-piper. Shakespeare.
 Who taught the parrot human notes to try?
 'Twas witty want, fierce hunger to appease. Dryden.
 The great, red and blue, parrot: of these, the middlemost are called popinjays; and the lesser, parroquets: in all above twenty forts.
 To PARRY. v. n. [parer, French.] To put by thrusts; to fence.
 A man of courage, who cannot fence, and will put all upon one thrust, and not stand parrying, has the odds against a moderate fencer. Locke.
 could
